School Success Story

 Benedictine
High School

While students and teachers of Benedictine High School were busy making summer plans, Beverly Zima, Auxiliary Book Clerk, found her first summer with the school consumed by one project: setting up the next calendar year's e-reader access for each student. She quickly realized how daunting the task was. Every publisher had its own login, and sometimes each book from the same publisher even had a separate login.

Even with the help of school guidance counselors, providing online access to 360 students proved to be hundreds of hours of work. "After spending my entire summer organizing 360 students' ebooks and lists of passwords, I then went to each class and instructed the students and teachers," she said. "They had to go to the publisher's website, find their book and bookmark the page. They could have five different websites and five different passwords. I did this for every student, freshmen to seniors."

With her summer gone and the beginning of the year's e-reader instruction completed, the headaches still didn't stop. Students came to her with password issues and teachers weren't able to access the websites, also coming to Beverly for help.

After the "not so smooth" transition to ebooks in the classroom, the school was determined to find a solution and searched for a company that could streamline the process for them. With this goal in mind, members of the school's technology department researched companies and found EdTech Software's website. A meeting was quickly set up between the school's principal, IT personnel, Beverly and the Operations Manager at EdTech.

Beverly said they also interviewed other companies and were promised a lot of things, but what made EdTech stand out was that, "EdTech created a personal connection by providing a lot of support. The personal attention was unbelievable, saying, 'don't worry, we'll take care of it.'"

The first summer with EdTech took some work getting all the grade levels started and organized, but EdTech made it much easier by contacting the publishers to get the school's ebook licenses and codes. Beverly said with a sigh of relief, "I didn't have to do that heavy lifting and now all the kids have to do is get on the dashboard and all their books are in one place."

When asked what she likes most about working with EdTech, Beverly said, "Besides making my life easy, EdTech provides immediate support. They are there every day, every minute." She also added, "Once the students and teachers started utilizing the EdTech support hotlines, students even started helping each other." Since implementing EdTech's software, Beverly now simply provides EdTech with the list of incoming freshmen and has happily taken her summers back.
